PLATFORM STATEMENT

Athletics are historically and socially significant in our national culture. Athletics provide a primary means through which we develop and maintain the physical vigor and stamina required to realize our potential as Americans. Athletics provide a primary means to develop habits, attitudes, and ideals requisite to ethical competition and effective cooperation in a free society. Athletics provide healthful and wholesome leisure time activities for our citizens and youth. Athletics have a powerful appeal for young people during their formative years. Athletic activities further the harmonious development of our youth. Athletic experiences should be offered to all students in the schools of Hillsborough County.

PRINCIPLES OF ATHLETICS

To fully use the potential in athletics for educational experiences, interscholastic programs should be organized and conducted in accordance with these six basic principles:

a. Interscholastic athletic programs should be regarded as integral parts of the total educational program and should be conducted so that they are worthy of such regard.

b. Interscholastic athletic programs should supplement rather than serve as substitutes for basic physical education programs, physical recreation programs, and intramural athletics programs.

c. Interscholastic athletic programs should be subject to the same administrative control as the total educational programs.

d. Personnel with adequate training in the principles of coaching should conduct interscholastic athletic programs.

e. The welfare of the participant should be placed above any other consideration. What happens to the athlete who participates in the sports program is of primary importance. His or her welfare should transcend any other consideration. Victory is highly desired, important, and should be sought, but not at the sacrifice of other values concerned with the development of the participant.

f. Interscholastic athletic programs should be conducted in accordance with the letter and spirit of the rules and regulations of appropriate conference, state, and national athletic associations.

THE RESEARCH

Research has shown that the involvement in sports is a safe alternate activity for young people. Youth sports are a deterrent to negative behavior and allow children to participate in positive fulfillment at a critical stage of their young lives. According to the President’s Council on Physical Fitness¹, early intervention is recommended as a tool to curb delinquent behavior that may continue over a lifetime. The role of sports as a safe alternate activity to violence and intimidation is gaining interest due to increasing concern with flourishing gang membership. Youth sports are considered a venue for reflecting or shaping society's acceptance or disapproval for violence and aggression. Intervention is crucial in the lives of youth that are facing a pivotal choice about whether or not to join a gang. Youth sports can offer an alternate activity that provides some of the same qualities as gang membership (peer relationships, competition, being part of a "team", social values, etc.) but it does so in a positive way.

Competition that provides a student with opportunities to pursue his or her personal best fosters competence and mastery, physical fitness, and emotional well-being. According to a recent Health Bulletin\(^2\) participants in team sports, such as basketball or soccer, or in individual team events, such as in track and field, learn the skills to risk appropriately and to accept the consequences of their actions. Sports are also a great stress buster. Concentrating on sports skills and performance quiets the mind and allows students to work off tension.

Being on competitive teams teaches boys and girls how to lead and how to cooperate, and those abilities serve them well in the world of work and in their interpersonal relationships. Mastering the rules and skills of team sports requires concentration and attention to detail qualities that go a long way in the classroom, too. In addition, once they master any set of skills, students become more confident about trying new things.

Students who compete effectively know the value of preparation. Competition requires them to set and achieve goals and also allows them to take pride in their accomplishments. Since most young people at least occasionally get down on themselves, working toward their personal best nurtures feelings of self-worth.

Competitiveness is a vital part of athletics. With all the positive aspects of competition stated, it must be also stated that the middle school philosophy has components that include all students with respect to participation. For this, schools must be presented options for completing the task of inclusion of all students. While teams that participate against other schools will have competitive contests, all students will have the ability to showcase their talents in events as well.

AT-RISK STUDENTS

The Middle School Athletics Program is expected to directly affect 8,000 children in grades six through eight in 2011-2012. An unknown number of children will be involved indirectly as spectators at the athletic contests. There are approximately 45,000 students in the 46 middle schools in Hillsborough County. No other extracurricular program involves more children, directly and indirectly, than the athletic program. Students who have displayed academic and behavior problems in the past will be aware of the athletic participation guidelines and will therefore know that grades and conduct must improve in order to participate on the sport teams. All of the schools reported that attendance, grades, and conduct among the participants were enhanced during the sport season. We have found that many students who we consider at-risk for dropping out of school are refocused in a positive way through their active participation in the sports program. Sports for many of these students may become the only reason they remain in school. If we give them the opportunity before they reach high school to enjoy the benefits of athletics, perhaps we will be able to keep them in school and allow them to become more productive citizens.
